

Vienna and Berlin as Cultural Capitals

Vienna and Berlin were not only seats of the two most powerful royal houses in German-speaking Europe, but were also European cultural capitals successively.

Regarded through lenses of literature, music, art, architecture and later, film, this course looks to the last years of the Austrian Empire and the years preceding the so-called Third Reich and the changes in everyday life brought about thereby and via technology, reflected in art and literature.

Taught in English. GE lit course.
