ADMINISTRATIVE POSITIONS

At Columbus

Chair, Department of Germanic Languages and Literatures (2014-)

One of the oldest German Departments in the United States, Germanic Languages and Literatures currently has 11.5 tenure-track lines, 25 graduate students, and a budget of just over $2.3M. Besides the BA, MA, and PhD in German, it also offers an MA and PhD in Yiddish and Ashkenazic Studies and a Minor in Scandinavian Studies.

At Amherst

Chancellor (2008-2012)

The Chancellor has ultimate responsibility for all matters on the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts. Founded in 1863 as Massachusetts Agricultural College, it became Massachusetts State College in 1931 and the University of Massachusetts in 1947. Today Amherst is the flagship campus of the University of Massachusetts system, which contains five campuses; Amherst continues to be the state land-grant institution. The Amherst campus occupies 1463 acres of land and consists of more than 400 buildings. It has over 20,000 undergraduates in residence and just under 6000 graduate students. It has a Division I athletics program that is highly competitive and participates in the Mid-American Conference, Atlantic 10 Conference, Hockey East, and the Colonial Athletic Association. Reporting to the Chancellor are all Vice Chancellors, the Athletic Director, a Deputy Chancellor, and a Chief of Staff. The campus has an operating budget of approximately $950 million, research expenditures of over $150 million, and almost 1000 tenured or tenure-track faculty members, as well as 350 non-tenure-stream instructors. The campus has more than 3800 professional, clerical, and trade staff to support the activities of the campus.

Chief accomplishments during my term as chancellor: appointed six vice chancellors; reduced base budget commitments by over $19 million; generated new recurring revenues of over $22 million; reorganization and restructuring of academic colleges and executive offices; promulgation of strategic plan; increased size of faculty; introduced plan to increase faculty compensation according to merit and market principles; redesign of first-year programs and first-year seminars; expanded new student orientation; new program connecting campus with community colleges; pipeline initiatives with Chelsea and Springfield; overseeing $800 million in new construction; opening of Boston office to facilitate fundraising and state relations; creation of Springfield initiative to assist economic development in Western Massachusetts; establishment of office of university relations; reorganized office of research to facilitate grant writing and submission; creation of innovation institute to enhance private-public partnerships in research; moved football program from FCS to FBS with membership in the Mid-American Conference; recipient of various awards for sustainability, economic development, and access initiatives; during my tenure campus established records for number of applications, number of undergraduate degrees, number of enrolled and non-resident first-year students, academic indicators in first-year class, percentage of minority students on campus, fundraising totals and participation, research awards and amounts, invention disclosures, total number of licensing transactions, total revenue, revenue from online courses, revenue from licensing transactions, number of Pell grant recipients, dollars for financial aid, retention rates from the first to the second year, six-year graduation rate. UMass Amherst ranking for public universities in US News went from 52nd to 42nd from 2010 to 2012; only one public university in the country had a more rapid increase. In 2012 US News ranked in top ten among schools providing internships for graduating seniors. Among top ten research universities in most sustainability rankings (AASHE) and Gilman scholarships. Ranked 11th in community service in USA Today and 5th year on President's Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll. web site: <http://www.umass.edu/holub>

At Knoxville

Provost and Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs (2006-2008)

Reporting to the Provost are nine academic colleges, the University Library, Military Affairs and ROTC, Enrollment Services, University Honors, the Graduate School, the Office of Institutional Research and Assessment, the Center for International Education, and the Student Success Center. The instructional programs of the College of Agricultural Science and Natural Resources, as well as its budget were also under my purview. The total budget supervised by the Office of the Provost was approximately $200 million. The Provost is the chief academic officer on the Knoxville campus and is second in command to the Chancellor. I was primarily responsible for the internal operations of the campus, but I frequently represented the campus to external constituencies, especially when the Chancellor was unavailable. I bore ultimate responsibility for faculty recruitment and retention, for academic programs at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, and for the budgetary process relating to all units reporting to me. I partook in discussions with the Chancellor pertaining to campus-wide issues outside of my direct reports. A Senior Vice Provost for Academic Affairs and a Vice Provost for Academic Operations, as well as a Special Assistant and several non-academic staff members, also reported to the Provost. The Provost sat on or led many standing committees, including the Council of Deans, the Academic Affairs Group, and the Chancellor's Executive Staff. As Provost I reinstated and restructured the Graduate School and provided a platform for undergraduate initiatives that increased retention and shortened the time to degree. I sought changes in evaluation and compensation of faculty to enable Knoxville to be more competitive in recruitment and retention of faculty. I also assumed chief responsibility on the Knoxville campus for the recruitment of Governor's Chairs, a program funded by the State of Tennessee in connection with Oak Ridge National Laboratory that is bringing distinguished, world-class scientists to the campus. Two programs I implemented sought to increase the diversity of faculty members recruited to the campus. Among my other initiatives were a task force examining student retention, especially in the initial year, a complete study of graduate support for the campus, and an effort to enhance and facilitate management data for the campus. I was frequently called upon to participate in discussions of Informational Technology, and I served on several committees dealing with Intercollegiate Athletics. Increasingly I became involved with fundraising efforts. I began a strategic planning initiative for the growth of the Knoxville campus to 33,000 students.

At Berkeley

Dean, Undergraduate Division, College of Letters and Science (2003-06)

As Dean of the Undergraduate Division I was responsible for the education of the 18,000 undergraduates in the College and for campus-wide enrichment programs. I reported directly to the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost. I had primary responsibility over curriculum management and delivery of instruction in the College, and contribute centrally to fundraising and public relations on the campus. I supervised two units and twelve programs: College Advising, a 45-person unit in the College; Enrichment Programs for the campus, including Freshmen Seminar courses, general education courses, undergraduate research programs, and undergraduate writing programs; and all Undergraduate Interdisciplinary Majors, which graduate 17% of the students in the College. Achievements included the revision of the deadline for dropping and adding courses, designing and recruiting for the general education requirements, introduction of oral proficiency curriculum, improvements in advising access and policies.

Administrative Chair of Comparative Literature and French Administrative Unit (fall 2000)

The Dean of Arts and Humanities requested that I take charge of this dysfunctional administrative unit. My task was to analyze the problems and undertake steps to eliminate them. Under my leadership the unit was reconfigured and is now functioning well.

Coordinating Chair, German, Spanish, and Portuguese Administrative Unit (1996-97)

As Coordinating Chair I was responsible for the administratively clustered staff. In this initial year of the administrative cluster I hired three new staff members, including a new manager, and made this unit the model cluster in the Humanities.

Chair, Department of German (1991-97)

As Chair I was responsible for supervision of all departmental staff, for the curriculum, and for departmental academic personnel cases. During my chairmanship the German Department was ranked number one by the National Research Council. The Department also revised its undergraduate and graduate curriculum, established its first web site, and introduced computerized modules for language training.

Graduate Adviser, Department of German (1986-88; 1999-2003)

Undergraduate Adviser, Department of German (1980-83)

The "Budget Committee" is the Academic Personnel Committee for the Berkeley Campus. Working in partnership with the Provost and Vice Provost, it evaluates all appointments, promotions, and merit increases, handling over 1000 cases per year. It also makes recommendations about FTE allocations. During the year I chaired, the committee introduced several innovations to expedite personnel cases. It also proposed two major revisions to ascertaining appropriate salaries, both of which were adopted by the campus. A report on salaries led to the formation of a Chancellor's Committee that recommended several measures to keep Berkeley salaries competitive. The committee also adjusted target values for departmental FTE for the first time in over a decade.

UC Systemwide Committee on Academic Personnel (2001-2002)
Letters and Science Executive Committee (2000-06)
Campus Strategic Planning Committee (2000-2002)

Committee was responsible for developing the academic plan for the campus for the next two decades in the context of the addition of 4000 students to the campus. The final report of the Strategic Planning Committee for the Berkeley campus is available online at
