Texts and Contexts Conference, the Center for Epigraphical and Palaeographical Studies, and the OSU Saga Club November Lecture Event

Introduction to Medieval Icelandic Manuscripts, The Ohio State University, Thursday, November 13th, 2014, 2 p.m.

Dr. Elizabeth Ashman Rowe (Department of ASNC, University of Cambridge), one of the leading figures in Icelandic Manuscript Studies, will be conducting a public lecture on the subject in the Ohio States, Inc. Founders Room at the Student Union. The lecture will be open to the general public and will introduce the participants to the field of Icelandic manuscripts as a whole. This lecture assumes no background in manuscript studies and will briefly cover codicology, illustrations, and palæography within the field.

Introduction to Medieval Icelandic Palæography, Workshop
November 13th, 2014, 3:30 p.m.

Following the public lecture Dr. Rowe will be offering a private workshop in the same location listed above. The workshop is open only to advanced undergraduate, graduate students, and faculty who have had some background in Old Norse and/or palæography. In this workshop Dr. Rowe will be introducing attendees to palæography as it relates specifically to Icelandic Manuscripts, including lessons on transcribing. As space and resources are limited, the private workshop will require permission for attendance.

Text & Contexts Conference, November 14-15, 2014

Dr. Rowe will be offering a paper at the conference hosted by the Center for Epigraphical and Palæographical Studies in the Ohio Union entitled, “Scribe and Script in a 14th-century Icelandic Annalistic Manuscript.” Please visit their website for program details: www.epigraphy.osu.edu.
