

Scandinavian 5151 • Spring 2015

Sámi Culture, Yesterday and Today

DuBois | 3 credit units
T/Th 2:00-3:40
186 Hagerty Hall

Thomas A. DuBois is the director of the Religious Studies program and professor of Scandinavian Studies, Comparative Literature, and Folklore Studies at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

tadubois@wisc.edu

This distance-enhanced course makes an interdisciplinary approach to the study of Sámi (Lapp) people of Scandinavia past and present. We'll examine indigenous modes of expression and worldview and contemporary cultural and political activism. Connections to Native American and Inuit experiences will be discussed, as well as the rise of US and other indigenous peoples' movements.

Scandvn 5151 is repeatable to a maximum of 12 cr hrs. No permission necessary for Undergrads!